Independent Study Guidelines

A student may apply for an independent study only in the following two cases:

- 1 The student needs a course for graduation which is not presently being offered, or
- 2 The student desires to study a topic(s) not covered in courses offered by the college.

A cumulative Loyola GPA of at least 2.0 is required in order to be eligible to apply for independent study (this GPA does not itself guarantee independent study will be granted). In general, students applying for independent study should also possess at least junior standing. Exceptions must be discussed with and approved by the Associate Dean. Students must complete a formal application prior to registration and must obtain approval from the desired tenured instructor and the Associate Dean. Application forms and additional information are available from the Director of Student Services.
